

Wright State University's Departments of Earth & Environmental Sciences and Teacher Education, in collaboration with the Ohio Mining and Mineral Education Program and the Ohio Department of Higher Education offer the nationally recognized, award winning professional development program:

Science Teaching for Ohio's New Economy (STONE)

What you'll learn:

- How to infuse Earth science content into inquiry science lessons and other curriculum areas
- What career opportunities are available for your students in the fastest growing STEM field, Earth Science
- How to connect with professional Earth science practitioners for classroom resources, career days and field experiences for you and your students

Audience: All teachers of grades 4-12 in all curriculum areas and intervention specialists

Dates: Two-week summer 2016 workshop June 20-24 and June 27-July 1 8:30-4pm. You will receive free lodging if you live more than 60 miles from Wright State University. Create, assess and report on an inquiry-based activity you develop for your classroom during the academic year.

Cost:

Better than Free!

Participants can receive CEU's or graduate credits. Credits are available at a greatly reduced cost. A limited number of graduate credit scholarships are available.

Teachers also receive a $250 stipend to spend as they wish.
